SEPTEMBER 2025: Featuring a Quilt Exhibit all through September.

"Quilts are more than textiles--they are tactile records of lives lived, communities, and stories passed down through generations. Quilted Layers: Piecing Together History explores the historical, cultural, and the emotional impact of quilts as both functional objects and powerful storytellers.

This exhibit invites visitors to examine quilts not just as handcrafted masterpieces, but as layered narratives--each stitch echoing the traditions, lives, and creativity of the individuals, often women, who made them. From the patterns of early American quilts to the designs of the Colonial Revival era, the pieces on display reveal how quilting has been a quiet yet enduring force in shaping domestic life, preserving memory, and expressing identity.

Through the vivid colors, intricate patterns and subtle variations in style and technique, Quilted Layers uncovers the hidden threads of history--binding together artistry, heritage, and the enduring spirit of those who pieced together beauty from the everyday.
